

Separate Parleys On Coal, Rail Strikes On

Washington, May 20 (AP) — Top Presidential advisers continued separate conferences with leaders of railroad brotherhoods and carriers today with the hope of "bringing them together very soon" in direct negotiations.

In making this announcement, however, Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary for President Truman, said he did not think joint conferences designed to reach a settlement prior to Thursday's strike deadline, could be resumed today.

Reconversion Director John W. Snyder and John R. Steelman, presidential labor adviser, are conferring with the disputants individually.

The Engineer and Trainmen Brotherhoods are seeking wage and working rule changes which the carriers have so far declined to accept.

"Not Talking Seizure"

Snyder, Steelman and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach are meeting today on the soft coal dispute, Ayers said in reply to questions.

Ayers said:

"As far as I know they are not talking about seizure."

Principals on both sides have said privately they looked for the government to take over the mines by the middle of the week.

The truce under which most of 400,000 striking United Mine Workers are again digging coal expires next week-end, while the nationwide strike of railroad trainmen and engineers has been postponed only until 4 p. m. local Standard Time, on Thursday.

No Sign Of Compromise

There was no indication from Ayers that the railroads or the Brotherhoods had agreed to any compromise so far.

"Mr. Snyder and Mr. Steelman are conferring along the lines of yesterday," he said, "with a view to resuming negotiations. They have hopes of bringing them together very soon."

Mr. Truman, who first cancelled but then reinstated his week-end flight to Missouri, planned to hurry back to the capital today after receiving an honorary degree from William Jewell college. The Chief Executive flew to Kansas City yesterday afternoon.

CAPT. SCHULTZ IS HOME FROM OVERSEAS DUTY

Capt. Granville R. Schultz, Baltimore street, has been separated from the service at the Fort Dix Separation center in New Jersey, it was learned today. He will revert to inactive duty status with the army upon completion of his terminal leave July 25.

His army career included service in India and China. He led his unit in convoy over the Burma-Ledo road from India to China and describes the road as "the most unusual in the world." At one point his group was atop a mountain. The road rises to a height of 9,000 feet and "is being constantly graded and as a result is slipperier than ice when wet—which is most of the time," Captain Schultz recalls.

Son-in-law of Dr. Chester N. Gitt, Baltimore street, Captain Schultz reported for active duty at Fort Meade, Md., from the army reserve on July 1, 1943, and was stationed there for six months. His next assignment was for ten months at the Indianapolis Gap Station hospital.

To Open Dental Office Here

Camp Ellis, Ill., was his next assignment and there he activated the 836th Medical Dispensary and was its commanding officer. He served overseas with the detachment for a year, making the trip with it by motor convoy from Calcutta, India, across the Burma-Ledo road to Kunming, China. Later the unit was the first medical detachment to be flown into Shanghai, China, on cessation of hostilities.

The unit was deactivated in December, 1945, and Captain Schultz was transferred to the 182nd General hospital in Shanghai. He wears two overseas bars for his sixteen months of overseas duty.

A dentist, he expects to open his office here in the near future. Doctor Schultz is married to L. Kathryn Gitt and the couple has a son, Chester, whom Doctor Schultz had not seen until his arrival here several days ago.

MANY CASES DISPOSED OF IN COURT HERE

Two men received suspended sentences, a parole was renewed for another and three others were ordered to pay weekly amounts for the support of their children at a session of the Adams county court this morning.

Court suspended sentence of Fred H. Shull, 58 East King street, Littlestown, on a charge of driving after his license was suspended after the court read four letters from prominent persons in Littlestown pointing out the need of his family for him to continue work.

Shull was placed on probation for one year, ordered to pay the costs and to pay $100 for the use of the county. The court told Shull that he is to obey the law and that if he comes back to the court on another motor violation he will be sentenced on both charges. Shull admitted several previous infractions of the motor code.

Hit-Run Driver Fined

Richard Miller, Midway, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year, ordered to pay the costs and a $50 sum, on a hit-and-run charge. Miller, State Policeman Robert Dietrich told the court, had crashed into a parked vehicle in New Oxford and then had continued on without stopping. Total damage was $5 in the accident. Miller told the court he was afraid to stop because of what might happen. The occupant of the car however gave chase and finally was able to reach the police.

Edward Russell, Gettysburg, who was over $200 in arrears in a support order had his parole renewed on condition that he make arrangements with the Victor Products company to deduct $10 a week from his pay to be turned over to the county, with $7 each week to go to the current support of his family and $3 to make up the amount owed. He was also ordered to stay away from his children while intoxicated. Russell had been in jail a week on a charge of creating a disturbance at the home of his children.

Other Court Orders

Arthur Beamer, Gettysburg, was ordered to pay $7 a week for the support of his two children, to enter into a bond for $500 and pay the costs following a hearing on a desertion and non-support charge brought by his wife, Ruby, Aspers R. 1. He was directed to pay the costs and first weekly sum by Saturday and to turn over $18 of a $34 pension he receives as soon as it arrives.

Albert Wolford, Gettysburg, was ordered to pay $6 a week for the support of two children still with his wife, enter into a bond and pay the costs. Earl H. Naugle, Middle-town R. D., was ordered to pay $4 a week for the support of his child, following a hearing on a desertion and non-support case brought by his wife, Ruth, York Springs R. 1. He also is to enter a bond of $500 and pay the costs.

Eight accounts were confirmed and one account was scheduled for a hearing.

'LITTLE' TROUBLE FOR OFFICER ON SUNDAY EVENING

Borough Officer Albert Wolford had "Little" trouble Sunday evening from 7:45 until about 8:15.

As a result:

Officer Wolford has a scratched face and neck.

Clinton Little, Hunterstown, who paid a fine and costs before Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore on a charge of failure to heed the signal of an officer, will appear before the county court on charges of drunken driving and resisting an officer. He has been sentenced to the county jail for 30 days in default of a $10 fine and costs on a drunk and disorderly charge.

John Little and Emma Little, both also of Hunterstown, are scheduled to appear before Justice Basehore this afternoon on charges of being drunk and disorderly and resisting an officer.

Stopped After Chase

The whole affair began when a tourist stopped at the police car on Baltimore street, near the square, and told Officer Wolford that there was a drunk driving a car out on Steinwehr avenue. Wolford went to investigate.

He found the car, swaying somewhat, on Baltimore street. He tried to halt the car without success. The police car gave chase down around the square. He caught the Little vehicle at the intersection of Stratton and York streets and pulled alongside motioning for Little to pull over to the curb. Little politely waved back.

This kept on, according to officer Wolford, all the way down York street, about every 20 feet Wolford would pull alongside the Little car and motion him to the curb. Little, Wolford added, continued merrily on his way. Finally at the York street bridge Wolford pulled the police car directly in front of Little. Little stopped.

The local officer said he walked over and asked Little to pull the car off to one side, as traffic was piling up behind him. Little refused, says Wolford.

Says Little Struck Him

Wolford reached into the car to turn off the engine and Little hit him, he adds.

By this time, the officer relates, traffic was tied up on both sides of the Little car and a number of (Continued on Page 2)

$22,000 LOSS AS BUS BURNS; GET PASSENGERS OFF

A Philadelphia-bound Greyhound bus which left the Gettysburg terminal at 3:35 p. m. Sunday afternoon, (DST) caught fire and was almost completely destroyed on the Lincoln highway three miles east of town, with a loss estimated at $22,000. The bus was valued at $25,000. Only the frame, running gear and tires remained.

The driver of the bus, John B. Harris, 33, of York, who discovered the fire at the rear end of the bus where the motor is located, calmly pulled off the highway onto the side of the road, got his 30 adult passengers and two small children safely out of the bus, removed all the baggage and fought the flames with the hand extinguishers carried by the bus until they were exhausted.

According to state police of the sub-station here, Harris first noticed a lack of power and that his motor was cutting out. Then he saw smoke billowing from the engine compartment by means of his rear view mirror. After pulling to the side of the road and getting the passengers and baggage out, he was assisted in fighting the flames by C. M. McGee, who operates a tourist camp and service station near the scene of the fire. Gettysburg firemen were called.

Flames Fed By Fuel

State police said one fire truck arrived within a few minutes after the call and that the flames were confined to the rear of the bus until water and fire extinguishers were exhausted. The flames, fed by 120 gallons of fuel oil for the vehicle's Diesel engine then swept through the entire bus, completely gutting the interior and burning off the roof.

James A. Aumen, Gettysburg fire chief, said the call was received by a telephone operator here and relayed first to the Eagles clubrooms to the drivers, who understood the operator to say that the fire was on Lincoln Highway west instead of east. Two trucks went as far as McKnightstown, found no fire, and spent five minutes trying to get the operator here, according to Mr. Aumen, before learning that the fire was east of town. They made a quick trip back, but were too late to save the burning vehicle.

WHY BRITAIN IS QUITTING INDIA, EGYPT

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The British Socialist government's empire-rocking decision to quit India and Egypt was impelled mainly by two factors, we are told by John A. Parris, an Associated Press correspondent in London, and these are:

1. Britain's great need for trade and the consequent necessity of maintaining good relations with potential markets.

2. Because of the development of the atomic bomb, imperial defense no longer requires the presence of huge armies in places like Egypt and India. On the contrary, maintenance of troops in such countries isn't worth the risk of creating political warfare. Members of the British government say England is determined to eliminate from her policy anything which might cause hostility and mistrust on the part of other nations.

Contribution to Peace

To these reasons I think we must add another or, let us say, place a rather wider interpretation on those already given. The new epoch upon which our old world is entering, provides no parking space for imperialism, or for any other combination of different races which are held together by anything else than ties of blood, friendship and mutual interest.

England, having recognized this trend a quarter of a century ago, when she inaugurated the British Commonwealth of Nations in which the sovereignty of the dominions was acknowledged, is now further tidying up her house. It is a great contribution to world peace.

So far as Egypt is concerned, while she isn't a part of the British Empire, she has been under what amounted to a protectorate. She was under an actual protectorate during World War I and then this was abolished in 1922 when she signed an alliance which didn't alter her status very much beyond the statement that her sovereignty was recognized. Bitterness against England has been growing in Egypt for the past generation until it has reached such a pitch of intensity that a British withdrawal was the only thing which could prevent a rupture of the peace.

'LITTLE' TROUBLE

Finally he got John, who is 77, into the police car and went back to try to get the other two Littles out of the vehicle. They refused.

Along about this time Donald Weikert arrived and offered assistance to Wolford. Wolford sent him to guard John and persuaded Emma and Clinton to join John in the police car. Then he asked Weikert to watch the three Littles in the back seat while Wolford drove.

Trouble, Trouble, Trouble

As the officer climbed behind the wheel he says the Littles attacked him. Weikert and Wolford subdued them and then the police car was started up the street. By the time it had reached Hankey's service station Wolford found all of the Littles on top of Weikert.

He stopped and restored order.

At Pinkboners service station, the two men landed on Weikert and Emma, says Wolford, started choking the officer and scratching his face. So they stopped again.

Then at the jail, Officer Wolford's trials still did not end. Emma, he says lay on the floor and refused to go upstairs. Wolford finally had to carry her up. She weighs about 175 pounds.

The Acorn club will meet Wednesday evening with Mrs. Harry J. Troxell, West Broadway.

TARKINGTON DIES SUNDAY

Indianapolis, May 20 (P)—Booth

Tarkington, whose novels found a place on the world's bookshelves, died last night in the Indianapolis home in which he had done much of his writing. He was 76 years old. His death took another of the small group of writers and artists who brought Indiana its golden age of letters shortly after the turn of the century. One of his boyhood friends was the Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley.

With those of Riley, Meredith Nicholson, George Ade, and George Barr McCutcheon, his writings brought Indiana a prominent place in the world's literary circles. Of the group, only Meredith Nicholson is now alive.

At Tarkington's bedside when he died were the author's wife, Susanah, his secretary, Betty Trotter, and Mr. and Mrs. John T. Jameson. Jameson is a nephew.

Tarkington's literary output was prodigious, and the quality was equal to the quantity. Two of his novels brought him the Pulitzer prize for literature — "The Magnificent Ambersons" in 1919 and "Alice Adams" three years later.

DDT WILL HELP ASTERS WHIP VIRUS DISEASE

Thanks to the army insecticide, DDT, asters which once were rated among the three most popular flowers, may be on their way back to leadership this year. For years they have suffered from an insect-borne virus disease called aster yellows, which was carried from host plants by a pestiferous insect known as the leaf hopper.

This is a tiny jumping and flying pest which does not eat leaves, but drinks plant juices. No insecticide had ever been found which would control it, until DDT was tried. When dusted on the plant, this new insecticide stays there until the insects, which swarm on the gardener's approach, come back to renew their feast. Then DDT strikes them, through their feet, and soon there are no leaf hoppers.

Use Cloth Fences
The aster wilt, which is prevalent in some sections, has been overcome by breeding wilt resistant varieties; but against the yellows no remedy had been found, except to grow the flowers in a cloth house, or a high cloth fence, which would exclude the leaf hoppers.

Because the plants grow slowly, they are usually started under protection, to give an earlier harvest. But if you are willing to wait, more vigorous plants can be grown by sowing direct in the garden.

New Varieties
Their large flowers, many colors, and beautiful forms make asters one of the exhibition flowers, which are gorgeous enough to present the sort of spectacle that is required for a great flower show. They have all the colors except yellow, but a yellow blend is found in varieties of the California Sunshine and Princess types, which have crested cen-

Snap Bean Is Best In Early Maturity

Snap beans rank at the top of home garden vegetables and will produce equally for the space they take with any other vegetable in the garden. They should not be planted prior to May 15 because of their tenderness. Even a light frost will kill snap beans. Both green and yellow bush and pole varieties of snap beans are available. The greatest mistake most home gardeners make in growing beans of either type is that of letting them mature too long before picking. They are at their best for both immediate use and canning when two-thirds to three-quarters grown.

It takes about a pound of seed to sow a 100-foot row, which, if well grown, should produce two bushels of beans. One bushel will can nine to ten quart jars, which means that one pound of seed will yield approximately eighteen to twenty quart jars.

TRITOMA UNUSUAL PERENNIAL
Tritoma, or red hot poker, is a most unusual perennial for protected garden spots in our section. It is not entirely winter hardy in exposed positions, or where winters are very cold. Good soil drainage will insure its survival in the vicinity of New York city, particularly if a large basket filled with dry leaves is inverted over the thick grass-like foliage. There are several fine varieties but those with bright orange-scarlet flowers are the most attractive. They bloom in the fall and the flowers are not injured by light frost.

There are dwarf asters, which grow into bushes covered with small flowers, and single asters, in effect large daisies of many colors, which will be new to many gardeners. If you try asters this year, protect them from the leaf hoppers by regular dustings from the time they are a few inches high.

MID-MAY TIME FOR VINE CROPS

As soon as chrysanthemums are a few inches high they should be pinched to encourage the development of side shoots and to keep the plants low.

When setting out tomato plants sink them up to the first two leaves. Summer-flowering bulbs like Montebretia, triglochin, summer hyacinth, tuberous begonias and tuberose may be set out this month.

Leave spring-flowering bulbs undisturbed until the tops have turned yellow and died down.

Harden Plants First
On warm days and nights remove the glass from the coldframe so the plants will become hardened before being transplanted to the open.

This is the month to sow seeds of vine crops, such as melons, squash and cucumbers.

Keep the strawberry beds clean by mulching with straw or similar material.

Mulch sweetpeas to keep the roots cool.

Dahlia tubers which have shriveled slightly during winter storage will benefit if soaked in water for several hours before planting. This treatment will restore some of the lost moisture.

Vegetable Plantings
If your garden space is limited plan to train your tomato plants to stakes set two by three feet apart. Set the stakes before you plant. The fence or special trellis also is used to support vines trained to two or more leaders.

To fill out the flower buds give peony plants plenty of water.

Remove tent caterpillar nests from trees and shrubs.

Plant lettuce, onions, Swiss chard, parsnips, beets, parsley, early cabbage, carrots, kohlrabi, mustard, turnips, New Zealand spinach, broccoli and early cauliflower.

For Sowing Seeds In Hills Start Is Made With Hollow

When instructions say to sow seed in hills it does not mean to build a mound of soil and sow the seeds on top of it.

Hills may be hollows in the modern garden; they are seldom elevated, except in sections where rainfall is heavy and drainage poor.

To sow seeds in hills means to spot them at definite intervals some distance apart, instead of sowing a continuous row.

Plants often sown in hills are the vine crops—cucumbers, melons, squash—and those that grow very large or tall, such as sweet corn, bush squash and tomatoes. The procedure is to stretch a line, just as you would for a seed drill, and along this mark the location of the hills at the proper intervals. Three feet or more should usually be allowed between hills, and at least as much between the rows of hills.

Scoop out a shallow depression and mix with the soil at its bottom a quantity of plant food, which may vary from a tablespoonful to a pint. The latter heavy dose is recommended by southern watermelon experts, for hills in which this crop is sown. Mix the plant food thoroughly and cover it with fresh soil, almost filling the hole; then sow the seed and cover with light soil, which can be depended upon not to form a crust before the seeds have sprouted.

When the seeds sprout they should be thinned out to the required number of plants. For those that grow in bush form, one plant to a hill is all that should be sown. Sweet corn is usually grown three plants to a hill; and vine crops the same. Thinning should be gradual, at first enough to insure each infant plant a chance to grow without interference.

Now, flowers always are smaller on old, undivided clumps.

Newly planted trees and shrubs benefit from a light mulch of peat moss, grass clippings or leaves. This material prevents the soil from drying out.

Prune lightly flowering cherries, magnolias and flowering almonds after blooming.

Spray or dust new rose foliage to keep it free from insect pests and disease.

It is generally safe to set out tomato plants after May 10 in the vicinity of New York and southward. It is advisable, however, to have hotcaps or baskets in readiness to cover the plants in case the weather suddenly turns cold. Fifty miles north of New York, the planting date should be set at least a week later. In sections of New England, May 25 is about right.

Early May is a good time to sow perennial seeds, as conditions for successful germination are favorable. The soil is warm enough to awaken the tiny germ in each seed, and the soil moisture is more uniform to effect quick germination. Keep the seeds shaded until the sprouts appear. Then semi-shade is best.

Remove tent caterpillar nests from trees and shrubs.

Set out pansy plants.

Plant dormant shrubs, trees and hardy vines.

Plant lettuce, onions, Swiss chard, parsnips, beets, parsley, early cabbage, carrots, kohlrabi, mustard, turnips, New Zealand spinach, broccoli and early cauliflower.

Bush Squash Grow Fast, Give Variety

For gardens which have room for them, bush squash provide an early and all-summer harvest of delicious vegetables, which are increasingly popular as new ways to cook them become familiar.

In two months from the time seed are sown, many forms of summer squash are ready for the table; and all may be served at any stage, from tiny fruits a week old to full maturity.

A favorite with many gardeners is the Italian marrow, which grows to a weight of several hundred pounds, but can be used when only a few inches long, for a dish which only the home gardener can enjoy at its best since these baby squashes will not retain their quality when shipped to the market.

Many Flowers Germinate Slowly

The fact that many flower seeds take considerably longer to germinate than vegetables is responsible for some failures by amateurs who sow them directly in the garden.

Those which germinate quickly, are the easiest to grow in this manner. Among these are the following annuals, which should germinate in five days: Ageratum, amaranthus, anthemism, candytuft, cardinal climber, centaurea, clarkia, calliopis, cosmos, cynoglossum, dahlias, annual pinks, heleniums, helichrysum, annual mallow, marigold, mignonette, four-o'clocks, Virginia stocks, viscaria, and zinnia.

When, in addition to quick germination, a flower has large seed and colorful blossoms, it is bound to be widely grown and popular, because easy to grow. Marigolds and zinnias, which share with petunias the popular leadership, are fast growing, large seeds; yet petunias, which rival them in popularity, have the smallest seeds of any, take 10 days to two weeks to germinate and are seldom sown directly in the garden.

YOUNG VEGETABLE STARTER

Whenever young vegetable plants are set out in the garden a starter solution of fertilizer should be used to re-establish them promptly. A teaspoonful of 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 fertilizer will give twelve quarts of solution. Prepare this a day in advance and use the liquid without stirring the solids which will settle to the bottom. Hold the plant in the hole at its proper position and pour a cupful of the starter solution right on the roots. When the liquid has seeped away cover the hole with dry soil.

TACKLING TENT CATERPILLAR
Even the sharp eye of a trained gardener is likely to miss some of the egg masses of the tent caterpillar when a search is made for them during the winter season. But, just

Why Keep And Feed Roosters?

Several years ago we heard a well known poultry owner state at a farmers' meeting, "The advice I am going to give you is and should be as needless as urging a city housewife not to buy and keep a wheelbarrow for use in the kitchen." Then he went on to advise poultry raisers not to keep roosters in the laying flock. Of course, the suggestion does sound trite to all poultrymen who understand the reasons, but for the rank and file of small flock owners it is a subject which demands discussion over and over, year after year, especially in the spring.

Male birds are needed for but one purpose—to fertilize egg for hatching. If the hatching season is over, roosters should be sold at once; if home eggs are not used for hatching at any time, there is absolutely no need for having a rooster in the flock.

This vital proposition may be stated in terms of food by saying that fertile eggs—those laid by hens after contact with a male bird—are not fit for human consumption under normal conditions, that only infertile eggs—those laid by hens free from contact with roosters—should be produced and sold for food.

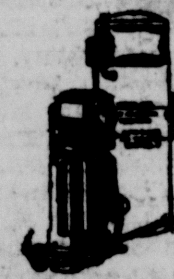

Why is this matter so important? Is not the keeping of male birds a common practice and quite insignificant as a factor of flock management?

Farmers lose several million dollars annually through the indefensible practice of producing fertile eggs for market or home consumption. In other words, keeping roosters with laying hens when eggs are not used for hatching is a costly blunder and cuts heavily into farm incomes as well as the financial and nutritional interests of consumers.

The reasons are simple. An infertile egg will not spoil in the ordinary sense of the term. After 48 hours in a temperature of 103 degrees it retains all its food value and most of its maximum flavor, and even after a week in this temperature it is still usable for cooking. On the other hand, a fertile egg begins to develop its germ in 24 hours of incubation to a 103-degree temperature, and at the end of 36 hours it reveals a blood ring and it is then wholly unfit for food. And as soon as the little caterpillars begin to hatch, the webs of the tents become plainly visible in the crotches of the branches. Remove the small nests with gloved hands rather than by means of a torch as the latter may cause considerable damage to the branches.

the embryo chick is clearly marked after 72 hours.

Of course, infertile eggs should not be carelessly handled by exposure to high summer temperatures merely because they are immune to spoilage. The point at stake is that poultry owners should produce only infertile eggs, except immediately before the hatching season.

Roosters not only require feed and care, but they introduce a spirit of unrest among hens and no minor degree of strife where more than one male is maintained. Economy alone dictates the wisdom of selling males soon after the hatching period and buying new ones a few weeks in advance of the regular hatching season. Of course, no roosters at all are needed where chicks are purchased and eggs produced only for food purposes.

"These are infertile eggs" is one of the best recommendations a poultryman can stamp on his market basket or in the minds of those who buy his eggs. And the flock owner who long refuses to recognize this principle of safety and savings, even if he produces eggs solely for home use, will ultimately find his hens a source of financial liabilities instead of profit.

Why keep a wheelbarrow in the kitchen?

TREAT SEED FIRST

Sweet peas, lupins and garden peas usually grow better if the seed are treated with one of the inoculants available for the purpose. Treatment stimulates the ability of the plants to obtain nitrogen from the air, where other plants must get it from the soil.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

War with Mexico: By the intelligence of our paper, it will be seen that we have been plunged at once into a war with Mexico—that hostilities have commenced—and that the whole country is in a high state of excitement. The "War Bill," giving the whole military and naval power of the U. States, into the hands of the President, has passed both Houses of Congress and been approved by the president—so that the beginning of the predicted evils arising from the Annexation of Texas has exhibited itself—when and how they will terminate, it remains for time to tell.

Married: On Thursday, the 14th, inst., by the Rev. E. V. Gerhart, Mr. Samuel Bucher, to Miss Anna Kraus—both of Franklin township. On Tuesday, by Rev. Prof. Reynolds, Mr. Enoch Kepner, of Hamilton township, to Miss Margaret McClellan, of Franklin township.

Finnegan Arrested: It gives us pleasure to state that this notorious individual who entered our county last fall, and kidnapped a family of colored persons from Menallen township and against whom the Grand Jury found a true bill for the act, was arrested on Wednesday evening, by the Sheriff of this county and committed to prison. He, with unparalleled boldness, passed through our town in a buggy in the afternoon with another individual, and proceeded in the direction of his former adventure. He had disguised himself—but fortunately was known by one or two individuals. Whilst arrangements were being made to pursue him he returned through town on his way to Maryland, and he had scarcely reached the outskirts of the town when Sheriff Schriver, accompanied by Ex-Sheriff McClellan and Mr. W. B. Seylar and followed by others, was in rapid pursuit, and after a chase of two miles overtook him. When overhauled, Finnegan leaped from the carriage and attempted to make his escape—but was soon safe in the custody of our fearless and energetic Sheriff. Great interest was excited in our village, during the chase, and a very large crowd assembled to witness the return of the captors and the captured.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
Election: The following gentlemen were re-elected officers, S. R. Gettysburg Water Company on the 13th inst.—Geo. W. McClellan, E. B. Buehler, M. Eichelberger, S. R. Russell and H. J. Stahl. The Board organized by re-electing George W. McClellan President and S. R. Russell Secretary and Treasurer.

Married: Sweney—Townsend—On the 17th inst., by the Rev. S. J. Bogle, Mr. J. M. Sweney, formerly of this place, to Miss Cecilia Townsend, of Mason City, Ill.

Several weeks ago a fire broke out in the mountain southwest of Mt. St. Mary's college, which gradually extended in the direction of and threatened the church. On Monday Father McCloskey summoned all the college hands and Professors and a large number of neighboring farmers, some 300 in all, to go to the scene of the conflagration. They worked with a hearty will, soon checked the fire, and afterwards partook of refreshments at the college. A good deal of timber was destroyed.

Death from Lockjaw: We regret to learn that Mr. David Hegy, sen., died at his residence in Hamilton township, on Tuesday evening (May 23) from lockjaw. Several weeks ago his right hand was so severely injured at the saw mill as to require the amputation of the index finger. The wound seemed to be getting along very nicely, until lockjaw intervened, resulting in his death. He was aged about 68 years. For many years he carried on the cabinet making business in Gettysburg.

GOD'S INTERPRETERS

It seems to me that the naturalists are among the world's finest interpreters. They depart from the trodden ways, explore the forests, idle away hours in the valleys, and sit by the still waters—watching, thinking, speculating, delving, and digging into the mysteries before them.

Time and space meant nothing to such travelers and discoverers in nature as Fabre, Burroughs, Hudson, Muir, Edward Thomas, Thoreau and Gilbert White. They were not theologians, nevertheless they have all been interpreters of God. They have gone to His laboratory and studied there, made notes, gained discoveries, and then let the entire world in on all that they have seen and met.

These nature writers have produced inspiring literature. Of recent years Edwin Way Teale has given this notable group, and is giving to the world books on nature that are worthy successors to the ones mentioned. His latest book, "The Lost Woods," embraces this fact. He is alert in mind, painstaking in his researches, and a sincere enthusiast in the study of nature. We need more such writers.

The nearer we get to Nature, the more we explore her moods, and learn of the creations there, the better we understand every created thing, whether a tree, flower, songster or roving beast. Nature's world is immense! No one can ever exhaust her offerings or ever learn her total secrets. Yet they are there for the lover of her haunts.

So intimate may become all the many things in nature that one almost clothes the inanimate with personality. The tree becomes a friend, and the river a singing poem. Each soft shadow, and every beaming ray of sunshine bespeak volumes. You feel that God himself is around, attending to His own. As he surely does!

No medicine in this universe heals like the medicine Nature gives in the beauty and form with which she displays her offerings. Take a vacation this summer, but stay away from crowds. Go to some simple site, pitch a tent, or engage a cabin—in fish, room and wander—but keep your eyes open—and what joy you will experience!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "And Yet They Live On!"

and Tuesday evenings Hon. Israel S. Diehl lectured in Agricultural Hall to large and appreciative audiences on Bible Lands. Mr. Diehl claims, and we believe rightly, to be the only American who has pushed his researches to the countries lying east and south of Palestine, and embracing some of the most interesting localities of both the ante and post deluvian periods. He was listened to attentively by large audiences on both evenings.—On Tuesday afternoon there was a matinee in the hall, largely attended by the school children.

Mrs. Diehl (late Mrs. Randall) at the opening and close of the lectures gave select readings. These lectures were given by Mr. Diehl and his lady for the benefit of the new Methodist Episcopal church—the receipts being $141.

DAVE FERRISS HAS START ON REPEAT RECORD

By JOE REICHLER (AP Sports Writer)

Dave (Boo) Ferriss, the Boston Red Sox' drawing righthander from Shaw, Miss., had a fine start today toward becoming the first pitcher to win 20 or more games in each of his first two years in the major leagues since Jake Weimer turned the trick for Chicago's Cubs in 1903-04.

Many hurlers have captured 20 triumphs in their freshman season, but other than the Cub southpaw, none has repeated as a sophomore.

Grover (Pete) Alexander, one of baseball's immortals, came closest. After establishing a rookie mark with 28 victories in 1911, Pete was stopped at 19 wins for the Phillies the following year.

Ferriss, who astounded the baseball world last year by nabbing 21 victories despite joining the Sox just a few months after receiving his Army Air Corps discharge, boasts five wins without a setback this season following his 4-0 shutout victory over the Detroit Tigers yesterday.

The 24-year-old sophomore's fine performance gave the American league leaders an even break in the twin bill, for Detroit's Hal Newhouser beat the Sox 3-1 on four hits in the nightcap.

Yanks Sweep Two The second-place New York Yankees moved within four and a half games of the Red Sox by sweeping their double header with the Indians 2-0 and 7-1 before 53,310, Cleveland's largest crowd of the season.

St. Louis Cards' Manager Eddie Dyer led with his southpaw aces, Max Lanier and Harry Brecheen, and they rewarded him with 9-5 and 4-0 wins before a Philadelphia record crowd of 35,049. The triumphs put the Redbirds back into the National league lead by one full game.

The Brooklyn Dodgers dropped a full game behind the Cards when they succumbed to the righthanded wizardry of Veteran Ed Heusser who permitted seven hits in pitching the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-0 victory.

Senators Take Pair The up-and-coming Washington Senators licked the Chicago White Sox twice 4-3 and 7-1, coming from behind to win the opener from 45-year-old Ted Lyons with two runs in the ninth. It was Lyons' 28th consecutive complete game over a three-year stretch.

After blowing a 6-0 lead and losing 8-6 to Chicago's Cubs in the opener, the Boston Braves came back to win the afterpiece 5-3 on a three-run seventh-inning rally.

In a parade of lefthanders, Pittsburgh and the New York Giants divided a double header, the Pirates winning the opener 3-1 and the Giants the second half 5-1.

Following up a 4-3 opening game decision over the St. Louis Browns, the Philadelphia Athletics unleashed an 18-hit attack, including eight doubles, a triple and homers by Hal Peck and George McGuinn to swamp the Sewellmen 13-2 in the nightcap.

Chapter 11

William had changed the place cards. After a fleeting sense of relief as she sat down at the long table in the dining room some time later, Whitney suddenly realized her maneuver to get away from any embarrassing questions Paul might ask was destined to failure.

Paul sat directly opposite her and every time she looked up she saw the hurt, bewildered expression on his face. She could feel Polly's stifled annoyance enveloping her like an ominous smoke screen. The Count who sat on her left was strangely silent. Only the Senator on her right seemed happy. He boomed out his good humor to his wife, farther down the table.

"What do you think of my new secretary, Mother?" He patted Whitney's hand lying on the table beside him with an elephantine swoop of his big hand. "My troubles are over now. The prettiest secretary in Washington — and the smartest! That'll make 'em all sit up and take notice."

Paul, ignoring the Ambassador's wife beside him for the moment, did not hear what the Senator said. He was leaning over the table anxiously talking to Whitney.

"What about an early morning ride over the course Monday, Whitney? I will be here whenever you want to start. Sorry I missed the run today, but Spuds has told me of the new water hazard and a few of the jumps he has changed. I'd like to see them. Grey Goose's leg will be all right by Monday."

Whitney tried to make her voice sound casual.

"Sorry, Paul, but I won't be able to ride with you before Saturday. My new job starts Monday. I'll only be able to ride weekends this fall."

"A job! What in thunder are you talking about?"

"Meet the boss," Whitney smiled up at the Senator who was beaming at her with a benign mixture of paternal pride and senatorial expansiveness.

"Yes, sir!" The big man happily exclaimed, aware of the commotion his announcement was making among the dinner guests. "Whitney starts punching the time clock next week in my office. From here on in she concentrates on her career."

"You mean, perhaps, on your career. But that is good," the Count observed. He looked at Paul with calculating eyes. "I am delighted with the news, Senator. It so happens that your office is just two blocks away from mine."

"And you will come to see me more often in the future than you have in the past," the Senator finished gaily. "I expect that." He looked across the table at Paul who was answering a question. Mrs. L'Hommedieu had asked him about Guam. "I wouldn't be surprised if quite a few of my young friends will now be better able to remember their appointments."

"Meaning me, sir?" Paul asked quickly as he turned from the Ambassador's wife, in time to catch the end of what the Senator was saying. "I'm sorry I couldn't get to your office this morning, but it doesn't matter now. I'm not interested in the letter I asked for. I'm leaving Washington sooner than I expected."

"But, Paul," Polly protested from the end of the table where she had evidently been following their conversation. "Your leave was to extend for at least a month. I've planned so many things—"

Her voice trailed off dismally as William started serving the terrapin. Whitney saw the straight line of Paul's chin harden as he said quietly.

"My plans have been changed. Polly. A few days will be all I need here for the 'business' I came home to finish."

His steady blue eyes were on Whitney as he spoke and something in his cool impersonal voice sent a little shiver up her spine. She had not counted on Paul's going away. In fact that was the very last thing she wanted him to do just now. Suddenly she had a sense of impending catastrophe. Things were not going at all as she had planned they would. For the first time, old Sally's famous terrapin tasted like straw.

"Do not look so worried, darling," the Count broke in on her sudden silence. "I love your idea of work—right beside me in town. We will have a lovely time. I am so good at cooking the spaghetti and gnocchetti—you must try me in your kitchen."

"Oh, Polly, why can't we play baccarat or roulette tonight?" Whitney cut in hastily, grasping at anything to break up the tension she could feel growing between the two men. "When the Offitts get here with their house guests we're going to have too many for bridge anyway."

"There's always gin rummy," Spuds called out from his end of the table. The Senator groaned.

"I was afraid of that. One night without gin rummy would etch itself on the tablets of my memory for all time! Personally, I'd like baccarat."

"That's because you know how to play it," his wife declared promptly. "I never heard of it."

"Easiest thing in the world to learn," her husband answered promptly. "And any number of people can play it."

"It certainly beats checkers for excitement," the Count drawled and the laugh that followed seemed to get the table back on an even keel again. After a little more discussion Polly agreed to the plan and gave William instructions for setting up a line of card tables in the drawing room for the game.

"We often play it here at Random Polly," Whitney explained to the Senator a few minutes later. "I just asked Polly and she says she'd like you to act as banker."

"Be glad to. That'll give me a chance to show Mother and anyone who doesn't know the game how it's played. You ever played it?" he turned suddenly to the Count who was listening to their plans with a faintly amused smile on his face. The Count shook his head.

"I never play cards," he replied quickly.

Paul shot a glance at Spuds Wilson at the other end of the table. He had evidently heard what the Count had said and shook his head slightly, but William, suddenly appearing behind Paul's chair, stopped of 70 Years in Gettysburg

Natural Ice Industry

This has been entirely replaced by artificial ice, though it was once quite an imposing winter industry.

The Springs hotel dam was the largest source, though some was cut on Rock creek—until the artificial ponds were formed on the Tiber, south of Middle street, and Lightner's pond on the Baltimore Pike (present swimming pool) by E. H. Minnigh and John M. Minnigh, respectively, confectioners, and the principal ice packers. Some of the butchers also packed their own ice.

The ice was stored in houses built at these ponds, and elsewhere, interspaces filled with sawdust, and additional saw dust used in packing the ice, from the bottom up, and used from the top down.

It was very remarkable the way they preserved the ice throughout the summer. They often harvested ice a foot thick—I don't think they touched anything under eight inches. Again, it would seem that, weather records to the contrary notwithstanding, one would have a hard time to find ice of that thickness today, if we were dependent on it.

Almost-Vanished Industries Saddlery—Do you remember the conventional sign—a model horse, or horse head, in the window, or over the door?

The 1880 Directory lists four, and there was in my recollection, another—the McCreary shop (he may have been dead at the time of the Directory). His residence was the brick house on the southwest corner of Baltimore and High streets, the shop next door south, in a frame building—present site of the Episcopal church.

Cigar Making—in 1880, there were four, of which three, I think, made the major portion of their stock.

The oldest was Samuel Faber, southeast corner of Chambersburg and Washington streets. Subsequently his son, Ed, opened his own business on Chambersburg street three doors from the Square—later in the northeast corner of the square—now succeeded by his son. Their "Plantation" cigar had quite a reputation.

This line of family shops is the only one which has survived—and yet, at least until a very recent date, makes some of its own cigars—by Mr. Murray Sheads, who I think has been with them all his life. George Stock, on Baltimore street, northwest corner of alley south of Center square, kept up the manufacture until his death.

Do you remember the "Cigar Store Indian"?—It almost seemed to be a "sine qua non."

Shoe-making There were twelve listed in 1880, and while the greater part of the shoes sold in town were then factory made, I think nearly all of the 12 did a certain amount of custom work. Jacob Stock, on Washington street, is the sole survivor.

JOHN K. TENER DIES ON SUNDAY; EX-GOVERNOR

Pittsburgh, May 20 (AP)—Pennsylvania lost a former governor and the sports world lost one of its colorful figures in the death of John Kinley Tener yesterday.

The 82-year-old Tener had fought off three critical attacks of pneumonia in recent years. But he suffered a heart attack at his home on May 1, and his condition grew steadily worse. Few people knew of his illness.

Tener was Governor of Pennsylvania from 1911 to 1915 and president of the National baseball league from 1913 to 1918. He also played with the Chicago Nationals from 1888 to 1890, achieving considerable success as a pitcher.

Only Three Ex-Governors

At Harrisburg Governor Edward Martin addressed the following letter to Alex C. Tener, a nephew, of Sewickley:

"Very greatly shocked upon receiving the news of the passing of my long time and close personal friend, Governor Tener. His administration as governor was marked by the enactment of some of the most important legislation in the history of the Commonwealth.

"We have all lost a dear friend and a great American."

Martin's office announced that the State's flags would be flown at half staff for a period of thirty days in memory of the late executive.

Tener's death leaves only three former Pennsylvania Governors alive—Gifford Pinchot, George H. Earle and Arthur H. James.

As an Irish immigrant boy, Tener had two burning passions—politics and baseball. He stayed with the Chicago club for two seasons and then left the game for business because as he once said "It never occurred to me to make baseball a career."

CHITWOOD WINS SPEEDWAY RACE

Williams Grove, Pa., May 20 (AP)—In a final tune-up for the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis speedway on Memorial Day, Jole Chitwood, the Cherokee Indian now residing in Reading, swept the boards yesterday at Williams Grove Park.

Chitwood won the 30-lap feature at the Williams Grove half-mile track, took one of the ten-heat preliminary races, and was the winner of a special prize for the fastest time trial.

Bill Holland of White Plains, N. Y., nosed out Walt Ader of Bernardsville, N. J., for second place in the president of a bank and founded a bridge company. In 1908 he turned to politics and was elected to Congress from the 24th Pennsylvania district but served only to 1911 when he became governor. He was a Republican.

Highlighting his term as chief executive was the strong support he gave to an improved road system in Pennsylvania.

He ruled as president of the National Baseball league through one four-year contract and part of another before a player squabble between the Philadelphia Americans and the Boston Nationals led to his resignation. Philadelphia refused to abide by a decision of the National commission, on which Tener represented the National league, awarding a pitcher, Scott Perry, to Boston.
